

Based in Battambang, Cambodia, Kinyei supports social projects and grassroots enterprise with social media tools and platforms for volunteer engagement.

We believe that the most effective, long lasting social change originates from within the communities it affects. It is driven by people, not policies, and grows from the inspiration and creativity of individuals who want to improve their way of life and that of the people around them.

To this end, Kinyei works with local, primarily youth-led groups who need a hand making their social projects and enterprises a reality.

The Kinyei incubation process is a full service support system, and includes dedicated business coaching, social media training, and technology services.

Exploring innovative volunteer engagement models and social media platforms, we introduce projects to the global conversation, leveraging support from a worldwide audience of supporters of social change.

Kinyei wants to contribute to a dynamic, cooperative global society that allows open collaborations across cultural, geographic and occupational boundaries, and a new model of international development which supports the agency of all individuals to determine their own future, and the future of their communities.
